EASAC was founded in 2001 at the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences by the national sciences academies of the EU Member States.

Its aim is to enable them to collaborate with each other in providing independent science advice to European policy-makers. It thus provides a means for the collective voice of European science to be heard.

The admission of the Cyprus Academy of Sciences, Letters, and Arts to EASAC, just a few months after its establishment, fulfills its founding objective for participating in International and European Academies and gives it the opportunity to be officially and actively represented in one of the main European academies.
